

The Journal of Peacebuilding and Development provides a forum for the sharing of critical thinking and constructive action on issues at the intersections of conflict, development and peace. The publication endeavours to capture and examine critical peacebuilding and development topics and questions that challenge our era, including:

- Development policies, processes and outcomes: implications for conflict and peace
- Strategic approaches to building peace and sustainable development
- Reconciliation and justice
- People-centred development in divided societies
- Governance, human rights and human security
- The economics of war and peace
- Social and economic policy: conflicts and possible resolutions
- Identities and relationships in conflict and development
- Globalisation: impacts, trends and agency
- Environmental justice and rights-based approaches to development
- Actors and partnerships for action
- Developmental assistance, humanitarian disasters and peacebuilding
- Poverty elimination, violence prevention and building a structure of peace
- Cross-cutting themes: power and empowerment; the role of culture, women, minorities and other marginalised groups; theory, policy and practice

Aiming to develop theory-practice and South-North dialogues, JPD foregrounds qualitative methodologies that aim to voice the micro, hidden impact of dominant policies and practices. The mix of theory, practice, policy analysis and recommendation seek to ensure that JPD offers a holistic, useful and visionary set of approaches for those striving to advance collaborative efforts between the fields of peacebuilding and development.

JPD's authors, advisors and editorial staff represent global scholarship, practice and activism.

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

JPD is a refereed journal with a panel of international editorial advisors and readers. All articles are read by at least two referees and the editors. We welcome the following types of contributions at any time of the year, although we periodically send out a call for papers on specific topics.

Critical themes and case analysis: critical case studies and/or thematic discussion and analysis of topical peacebuilding and development themes — 7,000 words maximum, including endnotes and bibliographic references. Significantly longer articles will be returned to authors to be shortened before being considered.

Briefings: 1) practice — training or intervention strategies, outcomes and impact; 2) policy review/analysis; or 3) country situational updates — 2,000 words maximum.

Book reviews: critical assessments of new books that integrate peacebuilding and development concerns — 1,500 words maximum.

Resources: notices of new books, reports, upcoming conferences and workshops, videos, E-communications and websites that link peacebuilding and development (150 words maximum); documents — declarations, communiqués and other relevant NGO or multilateral organisation statements (1,000 words maximum).

Presentation

- 1) Submit abstracts and articles to JPD prepared in word-processing software, preferably MS Word 6 or later, or saved in Rich Text Format. All submissions should come by e-mail to each of the following: abunimer@american.edu; erin.mccandless@gmail.com; maiagrace@yahoo.com; spike@mweb.co.zw and JPD@american.edu
- 2) Give full name, institutional affiliation of author(s), all contact details including e-mail and telephone number, and a brief biography. Provide an abstract of 150 words or less.
- 3) Use the Harvard system of referencing. References should be placed in the text where possible (author date: page). Notes should be limited to 10, and must be placed at the end of the article, as endnotes. Bibliographic references should be complete and in alphabetical order (author, date, title, place of publication, publisher).
- 4) Submit charts and graphs in eps or jpeg format.

Please send abstracts to: abunimer@american.edu; erin.mccandless@gmail.com; maiagrace@yahoo.com; spike@mweb.co.zw and JPD@american.edu

VISITING EDITORS AND PARTNERS

If you would like to participate as a visiting editor, or your organisation would like to partner with JPD in producing a Special Issue on a critical theme of peacebuilding and development, please write to the Executive Editors. JPD will produce Special Issues periodically, in partnership with another organisation specialising in the topic area. Visiting editors may be invited or accepted on particular themes with or without an accompanying organisation.

COPYRIGHT

As a condition of publication, authors publishing in JPD must vest copyright in their articles, including abstracts, in JPD. This enables us to ensure the widest possible readership in print and electronic formats while maintaining full copyright protection. Authors may use their articles elsewhere after publication without prior permission from the Journal of Peacebuilding and Development, provided that the Journal is acknowledged as the original source of publication, and that JPD is notified and provided with a copy of the new publication.
